

Course Description

Microeconomic concepts and applications used in analyses related to agricultural problems such as consumption, production, growth and development; resources; globalization of markets, environment, income, roles of government and policy. Macroeconomic concepts including national income, economic fluctuation, employment and inflation; fiscal policy. Illustration with contemporary cases and exercises.